

Krista Sermon has been an attorney with the Maryland Comptroller for nearly 4 years. Prior to joining the Comptroller's Office, she was a small business owner, and practiced law in both private practice and public service settings.

Her previous position at the Comptroller's Office was manager of the legal section of the Revenue Administration Division. October 1, she and Daniel Rohn inaugurated the new Office of Law and Policy, serving the Comptroller at the agency level. Among other duties, OLP is tasked with communicating with the practitioner and tax administrator communities.